

OK Magazine interviews Jordin

Contributed by Tyler
Monday, 13 April 2009

Former American Idol winner Jordin Sparks recently chatted with OK! about learning Japanese and trying to find love. "Jordin," she tells OK!, "is single."

OK!: You're learning Japanese?

The past year I've become really interested in Japanese culture. I thought it would be really cool to learn the language.

OK!: Do you still watch AI?

I do. If I miss it I'm always asking what happened. I try to keep up but I can't watch it every time so my grandparents Tivo it so that when I come home it's an American Idol marathon. I voted the first week for Alexis Grace and Danny.

OK!: You're not seeing anyone?

I'm not. I don't think anyone could handle my schedule! I'm still looking, though.

OK!: What's your idea of a perfect boy?

Well, I have grown up around sports my whole life, so I do like athletic guys, but I also like musicians and it's a little hard to find an athlete/musician. They have to be respectful, respect my family and who I am, they have to make me laugh because if they can't make me laugh I can't handle it because I laugh all the time, all day. If they don't have a good sense of humor and can't take my sense of humor, they're gone.

OK!: Tell us about working with John Mayer on "One Splendid Evening."

I was so excited because my mom told me she talked to John's manager and that John was going to call me on my phone and I was like, "What??" I had a little bit of a freak out but John called me and we were talking about this night and he was really excited, and so was I. I was trying really hard to not freak out, but I am a huge fan and I ended up telling him that and then I felt really lame after I said it.

OK!: Do you follow all of his frequent Twittering?

That's so funny you say that because I just joined Twitter. I had no idea what it was but I'd read all this stuff like, "John Mayer, Twitternation" or whatever, follow along, so I am currently following him but I don't think he thinks it's actually me. He has like 50,000 people following him and talking to him at one time, so he has no idea I'm following him. He's a smart guy though.

Former American Idol winner Jordin Sparks recently chatted with OK! about learning Japanese and trying to find love. "Jordin," she tells OK!, "is single."

OK!: You're learning Japanese?

The past year I've become really interested in Japanese culture. I thought it would be really cool to learn the language.

OK!: Do you still watch AI?

I do. If I miss it I'm always asking what happened. I try to keep up but I can't watch it every time so my grandparents Tivo it so that when I come home it's an American Idol marathon. I voted the first week for Alexis Grace and Danny.

OK!: You're not seeing anyone?

I'm not. I don't think anyone could handle my schedule! I'm still looking, though.

OK!: What's your idea of a perfect boy?

Well, I have grown up around sports my whole life, so I do like athletic guys, but I also like musicians and it's a little hard to find an athlete/musician. They have to be respectful, respect my family and who I am, they have to make me laugh because if they can't make me laugh I can't handle it because I laugh all the time, all day. If they don't have a good sense of humor and can't take my sense of humor, they're gone.

OK!: Tell us about working with John Mayer on "One Splendid Evening."

I was so excited because my mom told me she talked to John's manager and that John was going to call me on my phone and I was like, "What??" I had a little bit of a freak out but John called me and we were talking about this night and he was really excited, and so was I. I was trying really hard to not freak out, but I am a huge fan and I ended up telling him that and then I felt really lame after I said it.

OK!: Do you follow all of his frequent Twittering?

That's so funny you say that because I just joined Twitter. I had no idea what it was but I'd read all this stuff like, "John Mayer, Twitternation" or whatever, follow along, so I am currently following him but I don't think he thinks it's actually me. He has like 50,000 people following him and talking to him at one time, so he has no idea I'm following him. He's a smart guy though.